

How does your travel risk management policy rate against ISO 31030?

Independent assessment and audit

When your employees are traveling for work, you have a responsibility to ensure their well-being. However, the concept of duty of care can vary depending on perspective. Aligning with the ISO 31030 framework shows that your organization takes a proactive approach in managing travel risks, with a strong focus on employee safety as a core priority in your travel management strategy. Adhering to these guidelines also helps minimize legal and financial risks should any issues arise during travel.

Key benefits of aligning with ISO 31030

- Ensures corporate governance and duty of care compliance
- Minimizes financial risk
- Mitigates potential brand damage
- Supports business operations in high-risk areas
- Highlights the employer's commitment to safeguarding the health and well-being of travelers

Two services to help meet the challenge

Lightman Protection a renowned consultancy specializing in risk, security, and resilience management, to offer our clients independent travel risk assessments and audits. These services ensure that their travel management policies and procedures align with the best practice standards outlined in the ISO 31030 framework.

Option 1: ISO 31030 Readiness Assessment

The ISO 31030 standard auditor will deliver a report highlighting your organization's strengths and weaknesses, along with a checklist of actions needed to align with the ISO 31030 guidelines.

Option 2: ISO 31030 Readiness Assessment and Audit

In addition to the above, the certified Lightman Protection auditor will assess travel risk management documentation, conduct interviews with key personnel, and perform an audit of ISO 31030 compliance, working towards certification in line with the ISO 31030 standard.

Take the first step towards greater peace of mind

Aligning your processes with ISO 31030 fosters a safety-focused culture where travel-related risks are prioritized, properly resourced, and effectively managed with clear ownership. Contact us to learn more.